By John Simpson

Feb. 12 (Bloomberg) -- Royal Dutch Shell Plc confirmed that a list of leaked contact details of 176,000 of its employees and contractors said to have been e-mailed to human rights and environmental activist groups was genuine, the Financial Times reported.

Shell said the list did not pose a security risk because it did not include home addresses, the FT said. The e-mail included a 170-page covering note claiming to be from "116 concerned employees of Shell" and accusing the company of harmful practices in Nigeria, the newspaper said.
